If mismanagement is happening, I'd rather someone step in than to let it be mismanaged. Do they continue their education with that going on? I don't know too much and I don't know anyone there, but if I had to compare with Long Beach, Compton college curriculum should be the same. If they are mismanaging then yes, someone should step in. They have the potential to offer a lot for Hispanics and African Americans if they have the right support. They took them through all the training but then none of the people were hired. They need more professionals, more communications, and more people to come out. They need more people to back and support. They have very good programs. They need to get people that are really going to help people get a job.
